Both a "special purchase" and a "markdown" may be good bargains, but there's a difference between them. Young people 9-19 learn how to shop the sales--and get more for their money--in the national 4-H consumer education program conducted by the Cooperative Extension Service and supported by Montgomery Ward & Co.

Tips From 4-H Consumers

CHICAGO--Know the difference between a "special purchase" and a "markdown"? Both may be good bargains, but the first is usually merchandise a store buys from a manufacturer at a low price. A "markdown," on the other hand, is a lower price on goods that have been in the store for some time.

Young people can learn to be smart shoppers--and get more for their money--in the national 4-H consumer education program. Conducted by the Cooperative Extension Service and supported by Montgomery Ward & Co., the program helps boys and girls 9-19 evaluate their available resources and plan their purchases carefully.

Learn-by-doing experiences for young consumers include comparison shopping; seeking consumer information through labels, hangtags and advertising; exploring the use of credit; avoiding impulse buying, and shopping the seasonal sales.

By using the marketplace as a "learning laboratory," 4-H members discover how goods and services are delivered to the consumer. And they gain a greater understanding of their own role as consumers within the American economic system.

Montgomery Ward has encouraged the projects and activities of young people in 4-H consumer education for more than half a century. The company provides county, state and national recognition to 4-H'ers through a full schedule of awards arranged by National 4-H Council.

Up to four medals of honor are available in each county, and six $1,000 scholarships are awarded at the national level. One program member per state will attend the 56th National 4-H Congress in Chicago Nov. 27-Dec. 1 on an expense-paid trip. Winners are selected by the Extension Service.

More information on the 4-H consumer education program is available from county extension agents.

GRAPE JUICE, A SUPERB DRINK, ANTIVIRAL SUBSTANCE

For centuries, people have looked upon grapes and wines as aids to health.

Now, two Canadian microbiologists, using grape products, have shown in a laboratory test-tube environment, that grape juice kills some viruses. Welch's Grape Juice was used in the investigations, as were grape extracts, raisin infusions and wines.

Now the researchers will attempt to see whether grapes and grape products protect animals against the same viruses.

While the scientists labor, the rest of us can enjoy chilled Welch's Purple Grape Juice or Red Grape Juice or White Grape Juice at any hour of the day, poured over ice cubes or crushed ice.

Or serve a cooler, easily made by blending 3/4 cup Purple Grape Juice, 2 tablespoons partially frozen strawberries, and 1 medium scoop strawberry sherbet. If desired, float a few fresh or whole frozen strawberries on top. Serves: 1. Multiply as needed for two or three coolers, or for a punch bowl.
